The Newspaper Business.

"What facts can you lay before the committee, Mr. Swinton, in regard to the compensation of those who are engaged in the newspaper industry?" was asked by the Senate Committee.

"There are two branches of this business—the manufacturing, and the editorial and reportorial work. In considering the first branch it may be said that there is no more profitable industry in the world than that which is carried on by some of the great newspaper corporations. Some of them pay as much as 115 per cent. on the capital invested, and there are some editors, also proprietors, whose salaries are at least $500,000 or $600,000 a year."

In speaking of reporters' compensation, Mr. Swinton stated that the minimum received was probably $1,000 a year and the highest $4,000. The latter salary was only obtainable in exceptional cases. The writers for the newspapers as correspondents and so forth, received from $5,000 to $25,000 a year. The average weekly salary of reporters was from $40 to $75. The majority received $60. There were 25,000 persons in New York city engaged in newspaper work.

FRIGHTENED HIM.—The jailer at Macon, Ga., heard a noise at night in the cells above his office. Going up stairs, he found one of the woman prisoners trying to escape by crawling up the chimney. An account says he "called her attention to the fact that after reaching the top of the building there was no possible way to go down without falling, and then went down stairs, and was troubled no more with the noise."

DAKOTA NOMENCLATURE.

Meaning of Some Names Used Geographically by White Men.

The following have been mostly adopted from the language of the Souix Indians:

Anoka (anoka), both sides; the name of a town in Minnesota.

Chaska (caska), first-born boy; the name of a town on Rum River, Minnesota.

Chokia (cockaya), the middle; the name of a station on the road to Brown's Valley.

Cakato (cakata, pronounced chokahta), at the middle; the name of a town on the Manitoba Railroad. It is difficult to see how the metamorphosis of the name was made.

Dakota (dakota), alliance or league; the name of the Sioux Indians; also of a territory that will soon be a State, and of various other places.

Eyota (iyotan), greatest, most; the name of a town near Rochester, Minn.

Itaska (not Dakota), the name of a lake in Minnesota in which the Mississippi River heads. It is said to have been formed by taking part of each of the Latin words veritas caput.

Kandiyohi (kandi, buffalo fish, and iyohi, to reach to), the name of a lake and town in Central Minnesota.

Kasota (kasota), clear or cleared off, as the sky free from clouds; a small town in Minnesota.

Kewanee (kiwani), winter again, said of snow coming in the spring after the winter is supposed to have been over; the name of a town in Illinois.

Mankato (maka and to), blue earth; a town on the Minnesota river.

Mazomanie (maza and omani), walking iron; the name of a town in Wisconsin, between Madison and Prairie du Chien.

Mendota (mdote), the mouth of a river or lake; formerly the name of General H. D. Sibley's trading post at the mouth of the St. Peter's, and transferred from that to a number of other places.

Minneapolis (mini, water, ha, curling, and polis, Gr., city), city of the waterfalls. It is not absolutely certain how the "a" came into the word, but it is supposed to come from the Dakota rather than the Greek.

Minnehaha (mini and ha ha), curling water; it is allowable to translate it laughing water, a well-known cascade on Little Falls Creek, neat Fort Snelling, Minn.

Minne inne-opa (mini and inonpa), second water—the name of a beautiful waterfall above Mankato—it is the lower of two near together; hence the Dakota name.

Minneiska (mini and ska), white or clear water—the name of a town on the Mississippi River in Minnesota. The Dakota name of the stream was Minneska; the "i" has no business there.

Minneopa, the same as Minneinneopa, railroad station near Mankato.

Minneota (mina and ota), much water; the name of a station near Marshall, Minn.

Minnesota (mini and sota), water clear or slightly clouded; the name of the State and river. The latter was formerly called St. Peters.

Minnetonka (mini and tanka) great water; the name of a much frequented lake in Minnesota.—Fargo Argus.

The Loss of the Proteus.

The special dispatch from the N. Y. Herald's correspondent with the Greely relief party gives particulars of the loss of the steamer Proteus, when only a week out on her trip from Godhaven, Greenland, toward Lady Franklin Bay, where Lieutenant Greely's party are stationed. The Proteus was built for sealing and whaling in the acrtic regions, and the dockmaster at Sydney, Cape Breton, pronounced her the strongest of the many vessels that had touched at his port; but it seems to be beyond the power of man to construct a vessel that can successfully resist the "nipping" strength of great masses of ice. The escape of her crew, who had to travel a thousand miles in open boats, seems little less than miraculous, and reflects great credit on the seamanship of the officers and the endurance of the men.

The failure of the relief vessel to reach Lady Franklin Bay does not necessarily imply disaster to the Greely party. Supplies were stored in 1881 within a hundred and forty miles of the station; others were placed last year at a point which Lieutenant Greely knew might be used for that purpose. If either of these has been reached and found intact the party will not starve, even if they do not find much game and fish. There are boats and sledges at the station, and there is no reason why men may not have been sent to the southward by land or water, or both, in search of relief, or why the station may not have been abandoned, as, according to orders, it should have been a fortnight ago at latest.

A Request.

A story is told of the experience of the late George Dawson (of the Albany Evening Journal) with confidence men when he was attending a Convention in New York city. Walking toward his hotel he was accosted by a young man who inquired about the people of Albany in the usual style. With his paternal air, the editor turned inquisitor, and asked about the success of his companion, who reported that he had secured a good situation with a leading house. Finally Mr. Dawson, after congratulating him on his good luck, bluntly said: "I am very glad you are in such good position; will you lend me $10?" The canny smile which accompanied the request went like a shot through the sharper, who took himself off with rapidity.

MISS PHŒBE COUZINS, who was in the vicinity of the Minnesota cyclone, was reported among the lost. She writes that she is safe. It appears that when she saw the cyclone approaching she commenced to deliver one of her women's rights speeches, when the besom of destruction suddenly turned on its heel and went howling howlfully over the prairies in another direction.—Norristown Herald.

A MIDNIGHT RECOGNITION.

The Strange but True Adventure of a Chicago Lady in her Home.

Some time ago the wife of a merchant was suddenly awakened in the night by the sound of footsteps in her bedroom, and the next moment the light of a dark lantern flooded her face so near that she could almost feel the heat and hear the suppressed breathing of the intruder. Her husband was from home, and the only other person in the house except herself was a servant girl, who slept in the story beneath. Her presence of mind did not, however, forsake her. It doubtless requires a great amount of resignation and fortitude in a woman to listen to, without screaming, the ransacking of her store of valuable laces and the appropriation of her jewelry; but the lady, very rationally deemed her life worth all the lace and diamonds in the world, quietly closed her eyes and awaited the result.

The light was withdrawn from her face, and she heard the rustling of silks, the picking of locks, and occasionally a low whisper of surprise or disappointment. Then there was silence for a full minute—it seemed an hour to her—and a soft footstep approached the bed, and the glare of the lantern again fell upon her face. Through the closed lids of her eyes she saw the light, but remained calm and motionless in its scrutinizing rays, fearful that the least movement might imperil her life. What a moment of suspense! The light was removed from her face and she felt that some one was leaning against the bed. Still she remained motionless, nor did she stir when the warm breath of the burglar fanned her cheek. Not until his lips pressed her forehead did she spring up and half shriek:

"Who is in this room?"

"Hush!" responded a voice in a hoarse whisper, while a rough hand was laid on her shoulder: "Speak nothing and fear nothing."

The next moment she heard the sound of retreating footsteps and the creaking of a shutter, then all was still again. Satisfied that she was alone she sprang from the bed and touched a lighted match to the burner, then sank into a chair, completely prostrated with the danger through which she had passed. Recovering she looked round to ascertain of what she had been plunderd.

The drawers were all in the utmost confusion, but, strange to say, little or nothing was missing. A casket of jewelry was open on the bureau, but the diamonds and gold were all there. Beside the casket she discovered a little roll of paper containing a ring which had been given to her many years before, and which had been in her possession ever since. Half bewildered at the singular proceeding she was about to cast the paper from her when her eye caught the marks of a pencil upon it. She carefully opened it and read:

"This ring, which once was mine, tells me in whose house I am. You know I am an outlaw—the world knows it, and I do not care to deny it; but, fallen as I am, I cannot rob you, Maria, Forgive me and God bless you.

"HENRY."

This explained all. Falling on her knees, she prayed for him who had written the scroll. And who was "Henry?"

Ten years ago he loved that same Maria, and he would have made her his wife—for she had promised to be his—had he not taken to drink and gambling and finally forged the name of his employer, for which he was given a home in a convict prison. When he was worthy of her love he gave her that ring, and she had kept it in remembrance of what he had been. This is the story of the ring.

On the return of the husband the wife related to him the adventure and showed him the note; but he never attempted to arrest the burglar.—Chicago Tribune.

Civilization.

It is a touching evidence of the gradual civilization of the American Indian that he is beginning to care more for his clothes than for his dinner. Little Chief, a Cheyenne, has appealed to the Secretary of the interior for a new suit of clothes. "I don't care much for grub," says this Brummell of the prairie, "but I do like to dress in proper style. I want the best white hat you can purchase in the market." The wording of this pathetic petition leaves it a little in doubt whether in fashionable Cheyenne circles at present a white hat constitutes a suit of clothes, or whether prairie fall styles prescribe for the aboriginal "dude" that a white hat shall top off the splendors of a dirty army blanket and a coating of red and yellow ochre. But by all means let Little Chief have his hat. And as Wall street, New York, is just about shedding its tiles why not collect them and send them out to equip the rest of Little Chief's Tribe? Like bread cast upon the waters they will return to us in a few days with a bland request to put something in them.—New York Hour.

The Steamship Fiend.

Beware of the female poker player on the European steamships! She knows the officers, and by them is privately introduced to such old foo-foos as deposit most ready stuff with the Purser. Perhaps the Purser is in with her. She is slender, sharp-eyed, a little made up and deep as death. She travels with a son (she borrowed him). The son gives respectability to her and assurance to transgressors. The old foo-foos at evening suggest a game.

"I can play a little poker," she says.

"Well, let it be poker."

She raises it. She raises it high. "Bless you," she says, "my husband was a gentleman, and left me wealth. He taught me not to fear. I raise you, Governor, five hundred. Are you a gentleman?"

The Governor writes to his family, boarding at $25 a week, two miles back from the sea: "Travel in Europe is frightfully expensive. You must economize all you can."

TRAVELERS IN ARKANSAS.

The Story that Was Told Them by an Old California Miner.

Here is the substance of the recital of the old California miner, made when the four friends had been joined by several of the many miners who are prospecting in the Boston, Ozark, and White River Mountains:

"I owned a mountain of sulphur fifty miles out of San Francisco, and was supplying California at something under the price of the imported article. I had a sure fortune. I knew that every one of my teamsters had killed his man, and that their leader was a noted desperado. But they had given out that they were going to work that route, and as I could afford to pay their price I deemed it prudent to say nothing. At length, after a night in which they had filled themselves with rum, their leader came into my office, armed with two pistols in his belt, and said that the men had determined to demand an increase of about twenty-five per cent. He then said, clapping his hands to his pistols, that no other teamsters should run that line. I knew I could not pay the increase and undersell the importers; but without betraying myself I said in an unconcerned way, 'All well; go back to your hauling and load up for San Francisco.'

"After the train had got well off I hastened to the Sheriff of the county. 'Hurry down,' he said, 'and see Jim Johnson, ten miles from here. He knows your teamsters, and they fear him. He has killed his man, but in self-defence. He has a hundred horses, just thrown out of employment and they'll eat their heads off and ruin him. Get him and his men to your place before your teamsters get back, and the instant they see him they'll cower.'

"I found it as the Sheriff had told me; but Johnson required me to buy him out, as he had debts to pay. I promised him the $16,000 that he demanded, and two days later his teams and men were at my place. My teamsters were there also. There was blood on the moon. After a night's debauch the leader entered my office wanting to know the meaning of Johnson's presence. I replied that I had bought Johnson out, and should thereafter do my own hauling. The leader returned to his men, and was soon confronted by Johnson and his teamsters. The desperado quailed as Johnson bade him get out of that ranch, saying, 'I'll kill you the first man if you are here at sunset!'

"There was a consultation, and then one after another of the desperado teamsters came in to be paid off. They were dumfounded when they saw that I had the money ready for them. I had also two good pistols under my counter, and Johnson and his men right at hand likewise ready for them. They took their money, and walked away. They vanished that afternoon, but not long after that they attacked Johnson's teamsters from ambush. Johnson killed their leader, and the rest fled.

"Well some months later, discoveries nearer San Francisco made my sulphur mountain worthless, and after several fruitless efforts at compromise I abandoned the place, and to-day the sulphur mountain and the machinery stand there, utterly abandoned. Moral: Keep out of Mining."—New York Sun.

JAVA'S RUINED TEMPLES.

Description of Some of the Buildings Destroyed by the Recent Earthquakes.

The greatest force of the late gigantic eruption in Java seems to have been at the western end, where Bantam, the Dutch capital, is situated. But the activity of the under world force was not confined to one part of the island. About the middle of the island, but not given on ordinary maps, there is a group of very remarkable old temples. Their position may be roughly understood by reference to any map of Java, by drawing a line south of Samarang to the other coast where a river will be found called the Progo, and on the east of it there is a town which has a variety of spellings, but it may be written Djockjakarta—the Dutch call it "Jockio"—this place is also mentioned as having suffered seriously. About thirty-five miles from Djockjakarta is the great Temple of Boro Budder; also called Boro Bodo and Boer Buddha. The dome of this monument is stated to have been crushed in by falling rocks. The temple does not stand on the side of a mountain, but on the top of a hill, so it could not have resulted from masses of rock rolling down upon it. The destruction must be ascribed to huge fragments having been thrown into the air and then descending with terrific force.

Boro Buddor is by far the largest and greatest monument of the Buddhist religion in the East. The temple of Nakon Wat in Cambodia is the only other that can be put in comparison with it. The base is square, and each side is about four hundred feet long. The upper portion is circular and about one hundred and fifty feet in height; there is one central dome, and there are seventy smaller ones. On the terraces round it there are between four and five hundred chapels, each with a statue of Buddha in it, seated in the usual cross legged position. The sides are covered all round with bas-reliefs on each terrace; one terrace has 120 subjects, which embrace the whole history of Buddha. The temple is a solid mass of masonry, and is of the same kind as the Dagobas of Southern India or the Topes of the Northwest.

The first notice of this temple was given by Sir Stamford Raffles, who at the time stated that "the interior of Java contains temples that, as works of art, dwarf to nothing all our wonder and admiration at the Pyramids of Egypt." Miss North has lately painted pictures of Boro Buddor on the spot. About twenty miles southeast of Boro Buddor is a place called Brambanam. This is the site of the ancient capital of Java, and there are a very large number of temples standing which have more or less suffered from former earthquakes. One of the celebrated groups of this place is known as the Chandi Siwa, or the "Thousand Temples." This is also said to have suffered. There is a volcano somewhere near to these and to Boro Buddor, called Mount Merapis, which has probably been the active agent in this case.

STILL ANOTHER COLORED CADET.

Not a Negro Minstrel this Time.

The cadets at West Point have been studying over a recent acquisition, a colored man, and have decided not to bounce him. Some think that the reason the new cadet is not bounced is because he is able to whip any dozen white cadets in the place. In such a case it is injudicious to haze a colored man. Hazing is good amusement when the crowd can jump into a small cadet and torture him, but when a cadet is a six footer, broad of shoulder and strong of limb, who can take a platoon of ordinary cadets and tie them up in bunches like radishes, the fun of hazing is not visible to the ordinary cadet. But there are other reasons why the new colored cadet is treated as a gentleman. He is a gentleman. His skin is dark, but he is a kind hearted, genial, thoroughly good fellow, brave as a lion, and as well educated as any of the white boys at West Point. He does not put on any airs because he is a colored man, and does not ask any favors, or protection, either socially or in the line of his duties. He is not a negro minstrel. The trouble with Whittaker and Flipper, the other two colored cadets who were bounced, was that they were colored dudes, regular summer hotel waiters, who thought they must wear their hats on one side, and appear like the spoiled children of colored washwomen. The white cadets disliked these minstrels from the first, and their lot was not a happy one. When white boys go to West Point they have to submit to humiliation, and be the servants of other cadets; which teaches them discipline. It galls them, but they do it, while the colored cadets got on their dignity. They did not come there to be servants, and humility had to be beat into them, and because they would not submit to discipline, which is the first thing a soldier has to learn, they were finally fired out. The new colored cadet, Alexander by name, is a different sort of a colored man. He has gone there the same as a white boy would, to take things as he finds them, and not to become a full-fledged officer the first month. He says:

"Gentlemen, anything you say it is my duty to do, I will do, and however humiliating it is, I will never kick, but if I find you have compelled me to do humiliating things that it was not my place to do, I shall be displeased, and shall retaliate."

That colored man will come out all right, and some day we shall hear of him as a graduate with high honors. He does not presume upon his color to pull him through his examination without study, as Flipper and the other minstrel did, but he will study night and day, and conquer. His example could be safely followed by many white young men. A year from now no cadet at West Point will be more respected both by officers, cadets and visitors, than the colored young man, who goes there a student, instead of a song and dance man, and who seeks education, and not notoriety. Success to the colored cadet, and may he throw the first crowd that attempts to haze him into the Hudson river.—Peck's Sun.

MODERN WITCHCRAFT.

A Community Discovered that has a Sublime Faith in Witchcraft.

A respectable German family named Boyer, who have lived in Stony Creek Valley, Pa., for several years, were recently compelled to move away. Most of the inhabitants are believers in witchcraft. For four or five years they have annoyed and persecuted the Boyers, on the ground that old Mrs. Boyer was a witch, and had bewitched a daughter of William Kildey. Kildey is an intelligent river pilot, and is known all along the Susquehanna as "Squire." He is a firm believer in witchcraft. His daughter Emma was taken sick in 1877. She was afflicted with convulsions, during which she barked like a dog, made noises like a fighting cat, and talked German, a language she knew nothing about. Physicians tried for three years to cure her, but could not.

One day she told her father that a young man had asked to go home with her from Sunday school and she would not let him. He told her he would give her over to old Mrs. Boyer, who would bewitch her and she would die. Since then she has been sick. A witch doctor named Wolf told Kildey that his daughter was bewitched. He showed her half sister the likeness of the witch in a basin of water. It was old Mrs. Boyer, she said. Kildey then consulted Armstrong McClain, a peddler and witch doctor. He burned some hair on a shovel, and told Kildey that if he did not meet a brindle cow on his way home his daughter would be relieved from the witch's spell at sundown. He said that the witch was Mrs. Boyer.

Kildey said his daughter got better at sundown. She was well for some time, but had occasional relapses, when it was charged that Mrs. Boyer was tormenting her. Two years ago she was reported as being worse than ever. McClain was sent for to "lay the witch." He placed some roots and herbs in a bottle and sprinkled a white powder on them and filled the bottle with water. Then he asked for an old hammer, which was given him. He took it out doors and remained fifteen minutes. Returning, he walked to the patient's side. Drawing the hammer back as if to strike a powerful blow, he said: "Now I'll kill the witch, old Mrs. Boyer." He brought the hammer down gently against the girl's right temple three times. Then he took the hammer and threw it out doors, and said to Mrs. Kildey: "If your spotted cow kicks when you milk her to-night, be sure and don't scold her, because that's what the witches want you to do, and that will break the charm. I have settled Mrs. Boyer. She will die in seven months, and when they bury her her coffin will burst open."

John Boyer, a son of Mrs. Boyer, had McClain arrested finally for defamation of character, and he was bound over to answer at court. The Kildey girl continued to assert that she was still tormented by Mrs. Boyer, and, being unable to convince the superstitious people that they were being imposed upon, the family decided to move away.

Just as I came opposite to him he started back, evidently in great excitement, and pointing to a conspicuous sign on the board, he read in a loud, wild, rapid tone, '"Free School of Art and Design for Women." Great heavens!' he exclaimed, his voice choking with emotion. 'This ought to be stopped. Our women are a thousand times too artful and designing already. This must be stopped'; and inquiring of me where the nearest police station was, he sprang through the window and was gone."—The Judge.

After the Fair.

The Cattle Show and Fair have past. Thousands of people who visited the grounds last week came away dissatisfied. Undoubtedly the rain, frosty mornings and cold wind had something to do with this feeling of dissatisfaction. May be if the Association should listen to some of these complaints it would take measures to make their exhibitions what the public want. As it is it can do no harm to bring the matter before the attention of the directors.

It is a fact not easily disguised that the public do not care to put a day's time against fifteen cents worth of amusement and the Association cannot afford to give a show that is worth 25 cents for 15 cents, hence would it not be better for the society to change the admission to 25 cents and make the exhibition that amount better by offering heavier premiums and purses for trotting, especially the latter. Ninety per cent of those who attend fairs are more interested in the trotting than in wonder seeing. The trotting attracts more people on to the grounds than anything else. Poor trotting and "half-races" are sure to bring dissatisfaction. Isn't there some way we can have better trots and a more satisfactory fair next year?

Our columns are open for discussion of this question. Let us hear from those interested.

Notes By the Way.

BY OUR TRAVELING CORRESPONDENT.

We left home Monday, Sept. 10th at 10 a. m. taking the overland route to N. H., and at 5 p. m. we found ourselves at Conway Center, where the genial Chase is ever ready to supply the wants of the weary traveller. We tarry with him until the morning, when at 7 we take up the line of march passing Conway Corner across the Great Falls and Conway railway into the town of Albany. Judging from what we saw of the town in passing through it, we should look further before settling in it. We come next to "Tamworth Iron Works," whatever that means, for we see but little works of any kind. We pass on through Moultonboro, Center Harbor, Meredith Village to Meredith Center our objective point for the second day, where we propose to spend a few days in recreation and visiting.

Wednesday and Thursday we visit the Weirs, where the N. H. Veteran Association was holding a four days encampment. There was quite a large gathering of the Veterans present, and an immense crowd of men, women and children, estimated ten thousand or more. Friday we came to the realities of recreation and went fishing in the Bay, an arm of the Lake, reaching from Laconia to Meredith Center some six miles in length. It is a very pretty sheet of water and a nice place to sail, row, or otherwise propel a boat, but for fishing it was not a success, for we only caught three bass and they all wern't more than a foot high. Saturday morning we had planned to start on our return but not feeling quite satisfied with our fishing score we decided to remain another day and try another place. So we arranged our fishing tackle, packed our lunch, procured a guide and started for the pond where pickerel dwell. Our guide procured a boat and rowed us to the fishing grounds and we succeeded in capturing a very fine string of fish. At 12 o'clock we repaired to a big rock on the Chase shore for refreshments. Our guide took a sapling from the forest and attaching a line thereto sat on the rock fishing, which reminded us of a legend of ancient "writ," where it is said,

"His pole was made of the sturdy oak.
His line was a cable the storm ne'er broke,
He baited his hook with a dragon's tail,
And sat on a rock and bobbed for whale."

With this only difference, instead of whale he caught hornpout. Dinner being over we start on return, fishing as we go and arrive home in good season and in good order with all the pickerel necessary for the proper observance of the next day, which was the Sabbath day.

Monday morning we embarked in the "Lady of the Lake" at Weirs landing for Wolfeboro, where we stopped over one train to call on the Sanborn Bros. who are operating shovel handle machinery at that place. We had a very pleasant call and were cordially received and entertained by J. R. Sanborn who hitched up his team and took us to all the places of interest in the town. We took a train at 4 p. m. on Wolfboro Branch to the Junction, thence to Rochester where we stop for another visit.

Wednesday, Sept. 12th, we found an excursion train going from R. to the mountains, and receiving a very cordial invitation from several ladies who wished to go but had no male escort, we yielded and went. We shall not attempt to describe the scenery and the impression it had on us as we rode over the Ogdensburg road from North Conway to the Faybian House, only to say it is magnificent and grand beyond description, and every person should take the trip once and see for themselves.

We arrived at the Faybian House at 1:30 p. m., and took our baskets which the ladies had well filled with such things as they thought we might want, and repaired to the mountain side for rest and refreshments. After dinner all sought for pleasure and sight seeing in their own way. We found one of the ladies of our party was a "newspaper correspondent" which naturally led us to look somewhat in the same direction for means of enjoying the passing hour. Accordingly we roamed among the rocks and ferns, gathering such specimens as were most attractive, and cutting initials on the granite rock. At 5 p. m. we hear the familiar call of the conductor, "all aboard," and soon we are being rapidly hurled over the declining grades of hill and dell, up mountain passes on our return to Rochester, arriving there at 9 p. m., where we are at home for the night. The next morning we take the 11 a. m. train at Rochester and at 3:30 p. m. are at "home again once more." E. H. B.

Western Letter.

Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 1883.

MR. EDITOR:—We left Norway on the 3d. Arrived at Gorham, N. H. in the afternoon and found a number of Norway boys. We learn from Supt. Noyes, formerly a resident of your town, that a great portion of the repair work of the Grand Trunk railroad is done here. He has under his charge some 50 engines and on the pay-roll 115 men. By the kindness of Mr. C. Tubbs we took a ride and visited places of interest in this section. The Mascot lead mine, some 250 feet above the river on land of Esquire Hutchinson shows good specimens of ore.

We left Gorham the same night for Island Pond, Vt. and called on our old friend Dr. Pottle. We arrived in Montreal the next morning at 7 o'clock, and after breakfasting at the St. James, we procured a hack and took a four hour ride and visited the cathedral, principal churches and took a view of the city from Mt. Royal. We spent an hour in the nunnery and returned to our hotel.

We arrived in Chicago the following Friday, and via. the Northwestern came to this city, the objective point of our journey. We found Brother J. H. Porter and daughter smart and full of fun as ever. Oshkosh is a large lumbering town, 200 miles from Chicago, Winebago County on a large lake of the same name. The population is some twenty thousand. It is here where the Great Wolf River and tributary forms Lake Poggan and Winnebago. Oshkosh is a smart business town and I find that a great portion of its solid business men are from the East. J. H. Porter, J. S. Holmes and C. Bent, son and son-in-law of the late E. A. Holmes, of Norway, are men well-known in Paris. Mr. Porter gave us a ride behind "Black Prince" through the farming districts of Winnebego County including Algoma and Omeo of Rustfield, Eureka and Waukau. The crops, except corn look well. Corn was damaged by the recent cold wave. Had the pleasure of seeing the farmers thrash by steam. One thousand bushels is a fair day's work. We visited the Boom, forty miles north, and saw the immense amount of lumber there. We dined at the Boom House. The great wonder at this place is the Artisan Well, some over ninty-two feet deep, that throws a four-inch stream of water eight feet above the level of the lake. The water is soft and pure as any spring water. We visited Ripon, 22 miles out, a very lively country village. The County Fair was in session. The entres, animals and articles were good. We witnessed the Mill-men and Loggers play a game of base-ball for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society. Both nines were composed of the solid business men of the city and great interest was manifested in the playing. On the fourth inning the score stood 14 to 7 in favor of the Loggers. The receipts were $200 in favor of the ladies. We fear we are making this too long and will close. M.

North Waterford, Oct. 1st, 1883.

MR. EDITOR:—I saw by your paper of the 28th ult., an item in regard to the game of base ball played at Oxford, between the club of this place and the Keokas of Oxford. I would like to make a few corrections. In the first place, the writer says the Keokas suffered the disadvantage of having to take a new man in the left field, to take the place of Chaplin. Mr. Davis was the new man, and is a better B. B. player than Mr. Chaplin ever thought of being, and I claim that he (Davis) was the best striker in their nine, and made the first score that was made by their nine. Further, Mr. Robinson the Captain of the Keokas, told Mr. Hobson of No. Waterford nine, that Mr. Chaplin was the poorest player of the nine. I simply state these facts to let the public see what a disadvantage the Keokas labored under in taking in a new man. Further the writer says: "S. P. Childs of Bowdoin College umpired the game in a very satisfactory manner." Satisfactory to the Keokas no doubt. But sir, although being somewhat removed from the beautiful city of Oxford, we claim to know some of the rules of base ball. The book says: "When there are two men out and a fly is struck, and caught, that man, the striker, is out, and, a man running from the third base, home, at the same time, that score shall not count." That same thing was played and the Keokas claimed the score and the umpire gave it to them. Further, one of the No. Waterford's struck a fly and Mr. Edwards, their right fielder, started for it and when near where the ball came down, stubbed his toe and fell, striking fairly and squarely upon the ball. Picking up the ball he cries "Judgment." Umpire says, "out on fly." These decisions, unfair, and unjust as they were, were overlooked by the Waterfords, and had not the Keokas whined about laboring under a disadvantage, etc., etc., these points would not have been brought up. Such decisions as above stated are of great advantage—especially in a close game—to the party receiving them, and consequently a disadvantage to the opposite party. Now whether the Keokas labored under a greater disadvantage in taking in a better player than was dropped, or the No. Waterfords in abiding by such decisions as stated above, I leave for the public to decide. ALBANY.

In the death of Mr. George French which occurred the 28th ult. the town has lost a good citizen. He had often been elected to fill offices of responsibility and was always true to the trust committed to him. He had known much of sorrow, having buried a wife, six children and one grand-child, being all of his descendants.

Mr. John Cummings has in a measure recovered from his severe sickness, yet is quite feeble.

Theron Cummings has returned from Conn., and probably may settle on the old homestead with his mother.

Justice Aspinwall had a good cow break her leg in the field last Sunday.

Rev. W. R. Cross of Camden is visiting his parents here and preached to us last Friday evening, an interesting sermon. He supplied Rev. Mr. Bowler's pulpit, Bethel, last Sunday, while Mr. Bowler attended the funeral of Mr. French. H.

PARIS—Whitmore District

Hosea Bonney has finished the road that had been laid out, commencing at the top of the hill, known as the Ripley Hill, running north and north-west 91 rods to Will Masons; thus leaving the the old hill to grow up to weeds, as it always should have been. The new road we understand has been accepted and is open to travel. The first horse and carriage that passed over it was driven by Mr. Alf. Morse, of So. Paris. Without doubt Mr. Morse thought it a very pleasant drive and of course the lady would answer very pleasant indeed.

Our farmers say, apples scarce and potatoes plenty. The potato bugs did not injure the crop as much as we expected; but they will give it to us next year. We have not got rid of them yet.

Prayer meetings at the school-house every Sunday at 4 p. m. increase in interest. Sept. 23d, Rev. Mr. Cochrane preached a very interesting discourse to a full house. We hope he will come again.

GREENWOOD.

Alden E. Shed dug one and one half bushels of potatoes. Austin Hayes dug twenty bushels in one half day of the Beauty of Hebron variety.

Benj. A. Ring is quite lame caused by a hay rack falling and striking on his instep.

Isaac Hayes from Lewiston is visiting at I. F. Emmons. He is nearly 80 years of age and straight as an arrow.

Mrs. Martha Littlefield from Lewiston is visiting at D. G. Herrick's.

Rev. Seth Benson was to preach to us last Sabbath, but for some reason not known he failed to be present.

Sylvester Yates hauled a load of wood, Tuesday, Oct. 2d, a distance of nearly half a mile and says the sled ran as well as any time last winter.

Frank Willis has had the end of one of his fingers torn off in a portable grist mill.

Mrs. W. H. Martin has returned home from Massachusetts.

David Emmons from St. Johnsbury, Vt. is visiting his parents and friends. JOHN TOPSHAM.

OXFORD.

Mary, wife of John Martin, died Oct. 1st. For about twenty years she had been entirely blind.

E. C. Ambrose, esq., is about to remove to Florida.

Much sickness prevails in this vicinity, mostly among children.

The wife of our worthy postmaster, C. F. Durell, lately presented him with a bouncing big boy.

Mellie, son of Mark Morse of E. Otisfield, narrowly escaped death from the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting a few days since. He is severely but not dangerously injured.

Joseph Farris of E. Oxford has a splendid calf 7 months old whose girth is 5 feet and 2 inches. For build, color and symmetry we hardly think he can be matched in the county. MARK TAPLEY.

The ladies of the M. E. Church at Welchville have had their church kalsomined and repaired in a thorough manner by A. L. Fannce.

Levi Dingley of Casco recently sold one of his fox-hounds for twenty-five dollars.

Lewis Wardwell has gone to Stoneham, Mass. for good. SYLVAN DALE.

PARIS—District No. 5.

Fall term of school here closed last Saturday. Of the eighteen pupils in attendance, nine were not absent one half day, their names are as follows: Nellie F. Marshall, Mabel I. Rawson, Minnie G. Rawson, Sadie E. Bicknell, Lizzie F. Bird, Lillie M. Brooks, Charlie L. Buck, Perley E. Rawson, and Otis B. Rawson, while Martha Kimball, Winnie B. Marshall, Eddie Henry, Georgie Buck, John Porter and Georgie Bicknell missed only one whole day.

MASON.

The threshing machine has just been in the neighborhood and left a good record for our farmers in the amount of wheat. A. O. Paine raised 35 bushels, Ira N. Putnam 45, Horace Hutchinson raised on 1½ acres 36¾ bushels besides 100 bushels of oats, but Alpheus Lovejoy take the premium in raising 37 bushels wheat on about 1¼ acres.

A. O. Paine has placed on his lot in the cemetery a very neat and tasty monument. It is made of an extry quality of marble and adds much to the looks of his lot which has just been graded and other improvements made. We hope others will go and do likewise. B.

OTISFIELD.

Rev. W. J. Twort, the pastor of the Freewill Baptist Church, started for Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1st, for the purpose of attending the General Conference, and there will be no services at that church the two following Sundays. H.

The farmers of Otisfield and vicinity are to hold a Cattle Show and Fair at South Otisfield, Saturday, Oct. 20th. All of Otisfield and vicinity are invited to contribute to the fair. The ladies will hold their fair at the church. All are invited to attend. Drawing of cattle and horses, races and other amusements. If stormy the fair will be holden Monday.

SWEDEN.

Calvin Hapgood died Sept. 26th, aged 64 years. He has been in poor health for several years, had a lung fever last spring, and a hay fever in August lasting nearly through Sept., which together with his dropsical tendencies carried him to his grave. Calvin has always shown a kindness of heart which made him an esteemed playmate in his youth and a valued friend in riper years. He, assisted by his sister Maria cared for and supported his parents in their old age without other compensation than the enjoyment of their society and the satisfaction of being able to care for them in their declining years. After the death of his parents he married a widow lady, Mrs. Mary J. Marr of Waterford, who is left to mourn his loss. Four of his sisters and his only brother, Artemas, of Harrison are yet living.

Several persons have been quite sick with dysentery, but all except Albion Nevers' 5 years old daughter are slowly improving. She is quite sick yet, but not thought to be dangerously so.

Cholera morbus has been quite prevalent among us, although generally in a mild form, yet a few have been quite sick. One of the last is George Ellis, who is now considerable sick.

C. W. Bennett has sold the farm from which he moved last spring to Daniel T. Adams for $1,425.

Work at the steam mill is done for this season.

D. T. Adams set fire to a piece of felled bushes on the south side of Winns hill in the dryest part of Sept. and it took to the woods in spite of the hands he had called together to keep it within proper bounds. It went at a lively pace over the summit of the hill to the little pond where it found peat enough to feed on for nearly two weeks, so that Daniel had a lively time. But he showed commendable earnestness in fighting it back, so that it did very little damage except on his own lot. Daniel says he has learned a lesson now that he shall remember while he lives, and never shall start another fire out-of-doors in a very dry time.

Our veteran shook-maker, Robert W. Locklin, since finishing his harvesting is buying butter and eggs for the Portland market and selling fresh fish to his towns-folks. This is a new line for Robert, but he appears handy, and we think he will succeed in making a fair business out of it if he does not get discouraged initiating.

Deferred from last week.

ANDOVER.

Mr. W. C. Harris of New York, editor of the American Angler, was a guest at the Andover House Monday, Sept. 24th. He has been exploring the Lakes to find what he calls "the best route." He appears to be well pleased with this route and says "he shall call the attention of all sportsmen to the route via. Andover."

Huskings are now in order.

About two inches of snow fell in this town last Saturday night. At Indian Rock, near the lakes, four inches fell. The travel to the lakes has nearly all stopped, owing to the cold weather and the fish law. No more trouting this year!

Signs of logging begin to show themselves. Turner Brothers are logging on the Lake road.

The ladies of the M. E. Church held a Circle at the residence of Samuel Leonards, No. 4. A good attendance and a good time.

Last Sabbath the pulpit of the M. E. Church was filled by Rev. Mr. Dame, and that of the Congregational by Rev. Mr. Parlin.

Get out your overcoats and mittens. "A word to the wise" etc.

Several of our citizens attend the Cattle Show at Norway.

Last week closed the mails to the lakes.

We understand that Mr. Samuel Betton has purchased of Mr. H. D. Purington the dwelling house near the post-office.

J. L. Ripley is rebuilding the mills lately burned. He is getting along in good shape.

Mr. Moses Cutting is quite sick.

Samuel Clark is in town.

Hon. J. L. Chapman is visited by his neice, Miss Lilla Dresser of Salem, Mass. M

LOVELL

John Durgin has bought a fine cow of Fernando Tar a few days ago.

Oscar Brackett is buying butter and eggs for Lewiston parties.

Geo. L. Whitehouse, the veteran bear hunter, can be seen almost daily roaming the forest with his gun and little dog.

By the removal of A. P. Bassett and wife to Norway, we lose and they gain a most honorable citizen.

Heald and Walker, the well known cattle buyers, passed through this vicinity a few days ago.

The stage from the village to North Lovell will be driven the coming winter by John Farington.

Mr. J. S. Small, the veteran peddler, made his usual trip through this vicinity one day last week. He is a very kind and accommodating person and if any one wants a favor they will always find him ready.

We had quite a heavy fall of snow here the 2d inst.

Mr. Seth Hutchins has lately fixed up his stand at No. 4, which greatly improves the looks of his place.

Mrs. Wiley at the village, has just returned with her new styles ready for dress making.

Mrs. E. A. Kimball at No. 4 has gone to Boston to buy her fall stock of millinery and fancy goods. ELGERA.

BOLSTER'S MILLS.

Moors Hancock died after a brief confinement to his house, on Saturday, Oct. 6th, aged 71 years, 8 months and 2 days. Mr. Hancock has been doing business in this place about forty years as a merchant, has served in various offices in the town in which he lived, Otisfield, and has been postmaster in this place for several years past. He has been a member of the Congregational Church for many years and took an interest in the social and moral reforms of the day. Funeral services conducted by Rev. A. Lovewell, assisted by Rev. Joseph Wight, were held on Sunday p. m. at the church, which was filled in every part by those who came to participate in the services, and show their respect for the deceased.

Mrs. F. Chute and Mrs. C. E. Stuart and daughter have returned from their visit to Mass., after spending two weeks very pleasantly.

A petition has been circulated in this vicinity for the appointment of George Hancock as postmaster in place of his father deceased.

There is to be a Fair and Cattle Show at this place, on Thursday the 18th, under the direction of Crooked River Grange. All are invited to attend and exhibit their stock, produce, and other articles to add to the interest of the occasion. If the day is stormy the fair will be held the next pleasant day.

O. V. Edwards and his father, who have carried the U. S. mail over the "branch road" from this place to Davis' house during the past year, have closed their contract, and Mr. Davis now sends a team from his place with the mail.

Rev. L. W. Raymond of Harrison is attending the General Conference of the F. W. Baptist Church in Minneapolis, Minn., as a delegate to that body.

SNOW'S FALLS.

A few nights since the barn belonging to J. S. Clapp, esq., and occupied by George Mason was entered and a valuable harness, the property of Mr. Clapp, was stolen. Mr. Mason was on the alert and at an early hour had the complete measure of the thief's foot, also that of his horse, and measure of wagon track; and accompanied by Mr. Henry, they resolved themselves into a detective force and taking the trail followed their caller to Bethel. The harness together with a lot of belting taken from Messrs. Hammond & Cole's saw-mill, was found in the barn occupied by Samuel Goit, whom they had arrested, and fairly bagged, confessed the crime. He now awaits his trial at the March term of court, in the County jail.

DIXFIELD.

There is to be a Band concert at Grange Hall, Oct. 17th.

[Deferred from last week]

FRYEBURG.

The temperance meeting at the vestry, Friday evening, was quite interesting. The meetings, heretofore, have been held on the Sabbath, and it was proposed to hold one on a week day evening. If something can be done to interest the people, there is no reason why the meetings should not be a success. If the young can be induced to take a part, it will add interest to the meetings and also help those who take part in the exercises, but somehow the young people cannot see it. The next meeting will be held in two weeks from last Friday, at a place to be hereafter named.

Repairing in general seems to be going on. The M. E. church is receiving a new coat of paint inside; the Congregational is receiving a new coat of shingles and will be repaired inside, also the vestry will be reshingled; the academy is likewise receiving a new coat after the trustees finally concluded to have it done; Captain Bradbury is preparing to shingle the west wall of his stable; A. O. Pike is tearing down and remodeling; Charles Locke has done some more toward finishing his house, and E. P. Weston is having his store painted.

Rev. J. K. Mason will be absent from his pulpit the two succeeding Sabbaths.

Mr. Albert F. Richardson, who has been quite ill, is sufficiently recovered to resume his duties at the academy.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Mrs. Dorr has returned from her visit to Boston with improved health.

Mr. Chas. Young and family and his brother-in-law, Mr. Savage of Boston, who have been visiting their old friends in Waterford, have just returned.

Mr. Horr finds a few apples to evaporate but more to grind, pumpkins being numerous he substitutes them for evaporating apples.

Mr. Charles Munroe of Kansas, is visiting his brother Josiah at the present.

Mrs. Louisa Hamlin is visiting her sons in Boston.

WEBB'S MILLS.

Two new stores have been opened by John Berry and W. F. & C. Duran.

The Cornet Band hold weekly rehearsals under the instruction of Capt. H. A. Gerry of W. Poland. MARK TAPLEY.

H. J. Hamlin of East Waterford lost a valuable horse here Thursday, week ago.

Aaron Paige has opened a shop for the repair of boots, shoes and rubbers. See ad.

C. D. Waters and wife have returned from their western trip. They visited Milwaukee.

Mrs. Herman L. Horne has returned from her visit to Massachusetts and is slowly regaining her usual health.

E. G. Gammon of this town raised one and one-half bushels of potatoes from three potatoes planted.

Mr. S. I. Millett and daughter returned from their Western trip just in season for the County Fair.

Rev. Costello Weston will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday, also at Paris Hill.

Wm. Allen, who has been at home on a vacation for the past week, has returned to Haverhill, Mass.

The "cutters" have commenced work at the shoe factory that has been shut down a week or so for repairs.

Oliver H. Green, a real estate agent of Boston, Mass., formerly landlord of the Beal's House, has been in town this week.

Messrs. Whitcomb & Locke are having some repairs made at the upper mill. Mr. Cushman of North Paris is doing the job.

Horace Cole has in his employ an experienced jeweler. Mr. Hurst comes from Skowhegan and is a fine workman.

Some one stole a web of flannel from Whitcomb & Locke's store, fair week. This piece with others was piled up outside the door.

The Harry Rust post will have a Camp Fire and Quilt presentation next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Ladies are invited.

Remember Calder's Rip Van Winkle Co., that played Rip Van Winkle last evening give a different play to-night (Friday.) Entire change of bill.

Lost, between Noyes' Block and E. W. Howe's store, a gold breast pin with yellow stone. The finder will be rewarded by leaving it at this office.

An excellent crayon portrait of the late Dr. Danforth may be seen in W. C. Pierce's show window. It was crayoned by Miss Olive C. Hatch of this town.

A large party attended the Cattle Show Ball. W. S. Abbott furnishing, as usual, excellent music, only this time is was via. Chandler's Band of Portland.

George R. Howe, son of Freeland Howe, has been promoted by the Northern Insurance Co. as special agent with headquarters at Columbus, Ohio. He is the youngest special in the employ of the Company.

The C. L. S. C. will meet with the Misses Buswell Monday evening, Oct. 15th. Topics:—Song, Roll call, Comparison of examination papers Sec. II (Greek History and Literature,) Items of general news and Question box, also American Literature as assigned.

The first cotton and rice of the season found its way to our sanctum last Monday. It grew in So. Carolina and was a present from Dr. O. N. Bradbury of Yamassee. The rice on the stalk resembles some the seeds on broom-corn. The cotton-heads are a curiosity and are on exhibition at our office.

Little Miss Allie Fuller had a birthday party at her home last Saturday, her fourth birthday. She invited some half-dozen of her little friends, and though she was somewhat disappointed by two of her expected company being sick and unable to be present; still they passed a very pleasant and long to be remembered afternoon.

The readjustment of the postmasters' salaries, which went into effect the first of this month, was based upon the gross receipts of each of the postoffices, and this shows the growth or decadency of the towns affected. There has been an increase in only four "Presidential" officies in the State, Portland and Augusta for the cities, and Eastport and Norway for the towns. This shows pretty conclusively that Norway is growing.

About four weeks ago, while returning from Eastport in the "State of Maine," Mrs. Aaron Noble of our village experienced the most severe and painful attack of nervous blindness, commencing in the left eye and soon affecting the right eye. She was met on her arrival in Portland by a lady friend who took her to her own house, where she remained two days and a half, suffering much during the time. For ten days after her arrival home, she was totally blind, but has partially recovered the sight of her right eye, no sight having yet returned to the left. She is still suffering much pain, and is entirely disabled and confined to the bed a portion of the time.

Swapping horses is a good amusement where both parties get a good trade. "Brighton," or the jockey's acre at the recent Cattle Show was well occupied. The most severe case that comes to our notice was that of a four years old colt, as smooth and nice looking piece of horse-flesh as is often seen. The colt was owned by George French of Albany who has been training and fixing him, assisted by Dr. Walker of this town nearly all summer. This smooth looking colt had "wind-pipe fits," so called. It took two days and far into the night thereof to get him from Albany here. Thursday, he was traded for by Albert Hill of this town, who gave a horse, wagon and harness for him, and in less than 30 minutes after the shift was made the colt went into a fit and died.

C. E. Wilson, formerly an employee on the New Religion, visited us Thursday.

First snow of the season was on Tuesday of last week. It was preceeded by a heavy fall of rain.

Many strangers have been in town. Our subscription list has been materially increased.

The canning of corn at the factory has ceased and now pumpkin is being preserved.

Judge Virgin and D. R. Hastings were in town last week. They visited at Geo. A. Cole's.

W. S. Abbott has some of the large P. R. oysters that makes one happy to swallow.

America Bisbee, who was injured by being thrown from his carriage, is improving.

Kate Pingree from Haverhill, Mass. is visiting her relatives and friends in this place.

Henry Upton remembers us with a sample of his seedling grapes. Though not fully ripe they are very good.

The Dixie Company gave two entertainments in Norway Hall. Unfortunately the first night was stormy but on the second evening they had a good house.

Dr. G. W. Brown, of Harrison, has moved here and will take Dr. Turner's practice. Dr. Brown comes well recommended and we do not doubt will find enough to do.

Freeland Howe, esq. has returned from his fishing trip to the Lake and brings fourteen splendid trout with him. Success is almost sure to attend his efforts.

Mrs. Hannah Rowe, now in her 87th year, residing with her son, Jason F. Rowe, at Steep Falls, had an attack of paralysis last Sunday, and is now prostrate under considerable suffering.

David S. Andrews returned to Virginia last Friday. His wife and daughter will follow him in a few weeks. Several men from here go with Mr. Andrews to work lumbering for him, among whom are Geo. B. Yeaton, a Mr. Downs and two others.

The salary of the postmaster at Norway has been increased $100 by the recent readjustment that took effect last Monday. The apportionment is based upon the gross receipts of the office which show Norway to be growing. The postmaster's salary is $1300 per year.

Mrs. Bullard is stopping over Elliott's Clothing Store. She has a new and perfect system of dress cutting, "The Dress Makers Magic Scale." Medal awarded at State Fair in 1822. Ladies call. This system is thoroughly taught. Satisfaction guaranteed. Terms $5.00 with instructions.

Communication.

In passing up street the other day when near the post-office and while the children of the third primary school were having recess, I noticed a little girl crying bitterly on account of the interference of boys in matters that need not be mentioned here.

In view of the meager accommodations there, is it wise to have a general recess of the scholars, and cannot something be done to prevent the turning of out buildings into nuisances? B.

NORWAY LAKE.

Samuel Partridge is in a feeble condition.

J. W. Parsons and wife have been on a visit to Hollis.

Miss E. A. Parsons is at the old home for a time.

Sammie Kilgore who has been on the sick list for a few weeks, is out again.

Dimon Hamilton of Harrison and Emerson Kilgore are hauling salt boxes from Albany to Norway depot.

Mrs. W. F. Work has come home to spend the winter.

Mrs. J. A. Roberts is a superior cheese maker. We know this to be so, for eating is the proof.

Mrs. Oren Everett of Bethel, with her baby, has been on a visit to her parents, brothers and sisters.

Webster Kilgore was married last Sunday to Miss Lillian Burnham. May their days be many and happy. Mr. K. has hired Mr. Flint's farm in Waterford for one year. They have already taken up their abode there. Mr. Flint started for the west on Monday, for his health, to be gone a year.

The farmers are finishing up their harvesting. They have found it rather tedious digging potatoes and picking apples these cold, windy days.

Seba Gammon, the one legged old gentleman was out to the Fair last week.

There is good prospect of an early winter.

SOUTH PARIS.

E. B. Holden and John Pierce have received 3,000 bushels of apples at their evaporator during the past two weeks.

Ladies in the future will be admitted free to the skating rink.

The other evening as we were perambulating the streets in search of provision for the morning meal, we suddenly came upon a party of what at first we took to be young ladies on a lark of some kind. Imagine our astonishment on discovering the party to be composed of five of our most staid matrons, each with a pair of skates under her arm, evidently bound for some secret rendezvous, there to master the rollers.

Rumor says that Wallace Cummings will run the Andrews house in the future.

The Thayer Bros. have some fine horses for sale.

Gents' Plymouth gloves can be found at N. D. Bolster's. The best lot in the county. See adv.

The sled factory is booming. Timbers are being laid for the frame.

The school house is nearly finished, the arrival of the seats being the lacking element.

Dr. Davis has moved into the Chas. Morgan place.

Rents are scarce and fast growing scarcer.

4,000 shook arrived recently for boxes for the corn shop..

Ed. Beman works over to Norway.

The boys go a gunning now days, but the birds don't mind it.

W. J. Wheeler has a couple of good colts for sale.

The children of James F. Penley met at his residence the 25th ult., and presented him with a fine watch and chain. It was a great surprise to him. The children and grand-children were all present, except Miss Lula Penley, who is stopping in Chelsea, Mass.

NORTH PARIS.

The ladies sewing circle will hold an apron festival at this place, Wednesday evening, Oct. 17th, and a cordial invitation is extended to all. The object of this society is a very laudable one—namely, to procure blinds for our meeting house, which are very much needed. It is proposed to have interesting exercises, an antiquarian supper, etc., and a general good time is expected. Come one, come all.

Rev. J. E. Cochrane preaches for the Baptist people every 1st and 3d Sunday in the month, and we consider ourselves very fortunate in being able to secure his services.

At an election of Sabbath School officers last Sabbath, A. J. Abbott was chosen superintendent for the coming year, N. J. Cushman our former superintendent having resigned.

OXFORD.

J. K. Chase has something new to say about photographs in another column.

There will be a match game of ball on the grounds of the Keokas, on Saturday, Oct. 13th between a club captained by H. O. Blake and a club captained by Dr. Oren Stevens, the defeated club to pay for oyster supper for the victors. Admission to the grounds free and everybody invited.

The Band gave its first open air concert on Monday evening, in front of Durell & Hawkes store. At the close of the concert they were invited into the store where they were treated to cigars and apples. FELIX.

[Deferred from last week.]

PORTER.

Business of all kinds lively, and crops continue to come in well. Mr. E. T. Hartford raised 60 bushels of nice potatoes from 3 bushels planting (variety Early Rose.)

Hiram Wormwood met with quite a loss a few days ago. He had only one cow. He tied her up in the barn at night to feed her, and left her all right, in the morning when he went out to milk she was lying down with one of her hind legs broken. How the accident happened no one can tell for the floor where she had been standing was whole and smooth. He seems to have the sympathy of the community, but we have heard of no one who has really pitied him a dollar's worth yet.

N. S. Pugsley and his sister have returned from Boston much pleased with their visit, and the gay nights seen in the city.

Mrs. Minnie Fox and her little daughter of Detroit, Mich., are visiting with their cousin, Mrs. E. T. Hartford in this town. Mr. Wm. S. Morton of Conway, N. H. was a guest there last week, also Mr. Horace Chamberlain and wife from the same place spent Saturday and Sunday with them.

Rennie Norton, son of Frank Norton, died the 25th ult. of heart disease. He was about nine years of age. The little fellow was never well, and for the last few months suffered very much, but when the grim messenger came he took him gently across the river to the better land where disease and death are unknown.

Miss Edith Stacy has returned from Lynn, Mass., where she has been to work in a shoe shop.

We hope the "Hub" correspondent or none of the readers of the ADVERTISER will for a moment think, while we are mourning under the "white flag" that floats softly over us, which was raised by the said correspondent, that we are distanced by him, or that we are at a loss how to reply. We will simply say our time has been very much taken up of late entertaining friends, but the rhymes are on the docket and will appear next week.

Texas letter very interesting to us, it revived pleasant memories of our childwood days.

HARTFORD.

The Hartford Cold Spring Co. have completed their new building for boiling their table water, ginger ale, etc. and employed Prof. C. A. Walker, who has been employed in many parts of New England and connected with foreign establishments in making ginger ale, etc., to take charge of the extract department.

NON-RESIDENT TAXES.

In the town of Norway, in the County of Oxford, for the year 1882. The following list of taxes on real estate of non-resident owners in the town of Norway for the year 1882 as bills committed to Coleman F. Lord, collector of said town, on the fifth day of August, 1882, has been returned by him to me as remaining unpaid on the twenty-ninth day of July, 1883, by his certificate of that date and now remain unpaid. Notice is hereby given that if said taxes, interest and charges are not paid into the treasury of said town within eighteen months of the date of commitment of said bills, so much of the real estate taxed as will be sufficient to pay the amount due therefor including interest and charges, will without further notice be sold at public auction at the Assessors office in said Norway on Saturday the ninth day of February, 1884, at 2 o'clock, p. m.

Owned by Mrs. Lorenzo Sanborn heirs, house lot on Green St., acres ¼, value $50, tax unpaid .60, school .04, total .64.

CYRUS S. TUCKER,
Treasurer of Norway.

DOES DEATH END ALL?

Yes, death ends all the puny feuds of man—
The earthly fevers and the strife for gold,
Which make life seem as some half-finished plan,
And look so little when the tale is told.
Men strive a while each circumstance to mould,
To meet some feeble purpose of the heart,
Then nears the end—the blood grows thin and cold,
And then the soul, grown tired of Time and Art,
Half forms the wish that it might soon depart.

Death ends the platform quibbling of the weak
Who only caper to make mankind stare.
Scant is the meaning in the words they speak—
More scant the judgment in the creeds they share;
But then, this land is free as God's own air,
And men are free to institute rare schools
To mock morality and sneer at prayers—
To perch themselves on scientific stools,
And mete out wisdom—or be simply fools.

Death ends all doubting, doubt belongs to earth—
We know so little of our own estate.
We grow impatient close upon our birth;
And few there be who know 'tis well to wait.
Such small successes make the heart elate,
That we despise the wide, unknown abyss
Of God's deep wisdom, measureless and great.
Our pigmy judgment sees the world amiss,
And charges to His name—death ends all this!

But what of man's sublimer part, the soul?
Hath it no longing scarcely satisfied?
Does this life seem to it a mighty whole,
Or but a wave on the eternal tide—
A stream so narrow to a sea so wide?
Ah! still to reason, when life's ending nears,
One thought is paramount o'er all beside—
A wish to rise to more exalted spheres,
And progress still through everlasting years.

Whence comes this wish? Did the eternal one
Furnish all things the spirit fairly knows
With tastes fulfilled, and leave the soul undone?
Not so. Toward the sun the leaflet grows,
While from the sun the leaflet's living flows.
Thus shall the soul, through death's dark shadows fall,
Find what it craves where'er its essence goes.
And through the tear-clouds that surround the pall
Behold this legend—death does not end all.

—WILLIAM LYLE in Rochester Union.

HOW ONE WIFE MANAGED.

BY DR. DIO LEWIS.

Deacon M., a rich, respectable man of sixty-six, married for his third wife, Katie C., a pretty sewing girl of twenty-two.

Some weeks before the wedding, Katie, who had been my patient, came to ask my advice about her marriage, though, as she afterward confessed, she was already engaged. I frankly advised against the match, spoke of the Deacon's daughters older than herself, and urged his well-known penuriousness. But Katie was poor; the Deacon was rich, had a fine house, kept a carriage, and was the most considerable person in the neighborhood. They were married. The neighbors congratulated her.

About two years after the wedding, Katie asked me, in a little note, to call, and mentioned that she wished to see me confidentially. She was not very sick, but wanted to ask my advice about her troubles.

With much sobbing she told me that after being very kind for a few months, the Deacon had joined his daughters against her. I tried to comfort her, urging that in every position in life there were trials which we must bear with Christian patience.

"But," said she, "I need clothing, and have often spoken of it, but he always tells me of what the Apostle says about braided hair, and gold, and pearls, and costly array."

Fearing a bitter quarrel, perhaps a separation, and thinking I might assist in preventing it, I encouraged Katie to confide in me, and begged her to keep her troubles from all the world besides. She remained "sick" a week, that she might have some one to talk to and cry to. She finally said: "I suppose even you think I am too fond of dress, and that the Deacon is right when he lectures me against the vanities of this world. When I was married I had only three good dresses. Our Irish servant has a better wardrobe than I ever had."

Katie's mind dwelt so much upon dress, that I thought it best to learn the facts. She at length convinced me that the Deacon's refusal was a piece of his characteristic meanness. After a good deal of thought, I reached the conclusion for the thousandth time, that a wife has rights which the husband is bound to respect. I advised a plain, frank talk with the Deacon. The next day she told me that he had said she had better wait till he had paid the doctor's bill before she talked about dress.

It was clear that between the father and the daughters this poor child was pretty sure to be crushed.

At length a plan of escape occurred to me. Katie could run a sewing machine. I took good Mrs. G. into my confidence, and then said to Katie:

"Earn money with your sewing machine, and buy a dress. Mrs. G. is my friend. She is a prudent woman, and will furnish the sewing."

Having a motive for getting well, Katie was up the next day. I dropped in several times and found my patient getting on famously.

At length a resplendent silk appeared in the Deacon's pew. The sisters were astonished, and after the "ninthly" had been safely passed, they divided their time between the shining path to glory of which the good man was speaking, and the shining gown in the Deacon's pew.

The Deacon was puzzled! Here was the new dress which he had refused to buy. How did she get it? He was ashamed to ask. Katie said nothing. The daughters interrogated the dressmaker. She said the silk came, she made the dress; the Deacon's wife had paid her; she presumed the Deacon furnished the money; he certainly was rich enough. The merchant was quizzed. The young wife had paid him for the silk and trimmings. That was all he knew. There were only three of us who knew where the money came from. The Deacon and his daughters were not likely to find out about it until we chose to divulge.

In another month a pretty hat was added to the young wife's wardrobe, while the gorgeous silk shone on in all its glory, mocking alike the curiosity of her family and the ambition of the sisterhood.

"And now for pity's sake, where did the vain, silly thing get that ridiculous hat? I wonder if she has forgotten that she is a deacon's wife?"

Various articles of clothing appeared from time to time, and we were developing our "little game." Katie knew nothing of our ulterior purpose. We did not dare to give her the least hint of it; it would have frightened her. She went on for months earning money with her sewing machine, and buying coveted articles of dress and ornament. Of course it was very silly, but the poor child was not a bit of a deaconess. She had joined her husband's church, but the work of grace did not go deep enough to touch the love of French flowers.

After a time Mrs. G. whispered to a gossiping neighbor. Everybody in town, except the Deacon and his daughters, knew the whole affair within twenty-four hours. Soon the Deacon received an anonymous letter, saying:

"You are disgraced. Your wife is sewing to earn money to buy clothes. The whole neighborhood is sneering at you."

The Deacon went straight at his young wife.

"Where did you get the money to buy your new clothes?"

"I earned it by sewing!"

"Who have you been sewing for?"

"I cannot tell you!"

"But I must know, and I will know!"

"If you ever find it out, it will be through somebody besides me. I wouldn't tell to save my life!"

"But do you know what you are doing? Does not the Bible command wives to obey their husbands? You will be sorry for this."

"That is possible; but my mind is made up."

"But, my dear Katie, if you wanted money to buy clothes, why did you not come to me? You know if you need money, all you have to do is to come right to me. I would not have had you done this thing for ten thousand dollars. The world's people will never stop talking about it."

"I am surprised," said Katie. "You can't have forgotten that I have asked you again and again for money to buy clothing, and you have not given me a dollar since we were married."

With mingled anger and shame, the Deacon exclaimed:

"Well, now I want you to understand that if you need any money you must come right to me. This scandal, which is sure to spread all over town, is a burning shame. I can't see what you were thinking about. It will be an eternal disgrace to us all. The girls won't dare hold up their heads. My wife taking in sewing! Pretty story! I had rather have given you a satin dress every day in the year, than to have had you done this thing! Why in the world didn't you tell me you wanted some money? I would have given you a thousand dollars any day."

"Why, Deacon, what makes you say that? Don't you remember that day when the dressmaker was here making dresses for the girls, I begged for a dress, and at last was foolish enough to cry about it, and you pushed me away, and said you didn't think you had married a cry-baby? That is the last time I ever asked you for money. I fear I am not as useful as you expected, and I don't see why I may not earn the little money I need. I am sure I don't want to be a burden to you."

"Katie, don't talk in that way. Why, the world's people will never stop poking at me. My wife taking in sewing! Don't that sound nice."

"Then why won't you set apart whatever you think is necessary for my clothing? If you will give me an allowance, as you do the girls, I will be very thankful. You know what you give them. If you want me to dress as well as they do, and you will allow me the same, it shall not be wasted!"

"Would it not be better, Katie, to look upon our purse as belonging to both of us alike, and whenever you want anything you go to it the same as I do. I am sure a man's wife has just as good rights as the man himself! Katie, sha'n't we leave it just as it is, and you spend whatever you please?"

"Of course, Deacon, I shall have to do just as you think best, but I ought to be honest, and tell you that I think it would be better to arrange a definite sum, and then I shall not be obliged to lie awake thinking about it."

"Well," said the Deacon, "I will tell you what we will do. I will hand you ten dollars every three months, which you must use for pin money, and when you want to buy a dress, or any other such large thing, come right to me."

Katie made one more effort. "Deacon, I am sorry you can't see it as I do. I shall use all the money you may give me in a very prudent way, but if there is less than I need, I shall earn it with my own hands. I will not beg again as long as I live." This was exactly what she had promised to say.

"Well," angrily interrupted the Deacon, "as I am dealing with a Jew, I must come down. Madam, what are your terms?"

"I have no terms; I only want a small amount of money to buy a few garments. I will not humiliate myself by begging for it. If you will arrange to furnish me with it, I shall be grateful, and give you in return all there is of me. If you do not give me the money when I need it, I shall work for it. If there is any extra work in your family which I can do for pay, I shall prefer to work for you; but if not, I shall, with every precaution to save your feelings, ask for work outside."

"Madam, will you be kind enough to mention your terms?"

"If you will give two hundred dollars a year, and will be kind enough to let me have a quarter of it every three months, I will make it pay for my clothing. You give each of your daughters three hundred, but I will make two hundred dollars do, and I will never ask for more. If you will be so good as to allow me this sum, it will relieve me of a great trouble."

"Let it be so," angrily exclaimed the Deacon.

As he went out, he muttered to himself, "My wife taking in sewing! The world's people will never stop sneering at me. Taking in sewing! Pretty story! Never can tell what a woman will do! Most unreasonable creatures in the world! Taking in sewing! Wouldn't had it happen for ten thousand dollars! The world's people will never stop laughing about it."

With persons in comfortable circumstances this is a good and wise expedient. Most happily I have known it to work in a number of cases. It has many advantages; it is honest, convincing and effective. It challenges the respect of the husband, and if done in a gentle spirit awakens his sympathy and sense of justice. With a little patience I think it will prove uniformly successful.

Most husbands will indignantly denounce all such interference with the management of their families. If a husband goes astray, nine men in ten are furious at the tale-bearer who communicates with the wife; but let the wife go astray, how full of sympathy and help for the wronged husband these same nine men are.

Gentlemen, fellow-husbands, has not this animal, brutal selfishness gone about far enough? Has not the time come, in the race of life, to remove all obstacles from the pathway of those whom we call "the weaker vessels?" If either of us must be handicapped, which do you, brave men, say it shall be?—Dio Lewis's Monthly.

Alleged Cure by a Mad-Stone.

The Terre Haute Express says:—A short while ago a Mr. Padgett and wife, accompanied by their niece, a child of eight years, arrived in this city from Washington, Ind., and went to the residence of Mrs. Taylor, No. 530 North Ninth street. Their mission here was to have Mrs. Taylor apply her mad-stone to the child, which was supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog. The child was the possessor of a small dog, a great pet. Some time ago the dog went away, but returned in a few days. The little girl was very anxious about her pet, not knowing where it was, and when she saw it ran to play with it. The dog, always kind before, sprang at her and bit her in many places, nearly tearing the clothing off her body. Her screams brought assistance, and the dog was beaten off. It was noticed that it frothed at the mouth, and ran around in a circle. It was concluded that the dog was mad, and it was killed. A physician was called and the wounds cauterized. Some one mentioned the Terre Haute mad-stone, and it was determined to bring the little girl to this city. The little one's hands and arms were almost black from cauterization, Mrs. Taylor scraped the flesh above one of the wounds till the blood flowed. The stone was then put on and bandaged to the arm. In an hour the bandages were removed but the stone was still adhering. The bandages were again put on. The stone was applied a little after nine o'clock in the morning and adhered until ten o'clock in the evening. The virus drawn from the arm soaked through two thicknesses of cloth. After the stone dropped off it was placed in warm water, and thoroughly cleaned, the bottom of the basin being covered with virus. After it was cleaned it was applied again but would not adhere. The child was pronounced cured and was taken home the next day.

Mad-stones are very rare, and very few are known to exist. There is a mad-stone in Des Moines, Iowa; Keokuk, the same State; one in Louisville, and one in Taylorville, Ill. Many people doubt their existence. The writer has heard many people who considered themselves well informed deny that there was such a stone. But almost every one in Terre Haute knows that there is one in Terre Haute, and have heard of the wonderful cures it performed. Where the mad-stones come from no one seems to know. Their possessors are not able to tell. An old Indian chief said that mad-stones were found in the stomachs of extremely old buck deers. The one in the possession of Mrs. Taylor has been in her family for eighty years or more. It was brought from Virginia to Kentucky in the early days, and from Kentucky to this city. Mrs. Taylor knows nothing of its origin. This stone is not very large, is square, measuring about three-eighths of an inch on each side. It is porus, and when applied to the wound the virus passes through it into the bandages. It has never been known to fail when applied before the person was attacked by hydrophobia. It will sometimes cure after the patient has had slight convulsions, but it will not always do so.

Hawkeye Dots.

BY R. J. BURDETTE.

"Why should people sometimes marry in haste?" asked young Harry, looking up from his book. "Oh," replied old Harry, "because time and tide wait for no man, and if they waited for any woman they would never get there."

A Philadelphia dentist makes you a set of store teeth and lets you take them home on ten days' trial. It's an ungrateful customer that will go back on his own teeth. How mean that would be. "How childer than a serpent's sharp it is to have a toothless thank."

A man makes an awful row if his wife takes his razor to trim a little maize on her little toe or sharpen a lead pencil, but he thinks it is all right, and scoffs at her, if she shrieks her feeble protests when he takes her little embroidery scissors to cut a copper telephone wire. "Don't hurt the scissors at all," he says.

A Dayton, Ohio, man writes to the papers that his child "had fifty fits in twenty-four hours," and is now well, hearty and rugged. Oh, well, we should think it very likely. A child that has made a record of fifty-two fits in twenty-four hours ought to be tough enough to board all the year round. The Asiatic cholera would balk at that infant.

There isn't a sardine on this side of the Atlantic ocean, and yet there are three big sardine factories in full blast on the coast of Maine. Now, how do you make that out? Easily enough, "easy as lying," in fact. One swallow does not make a summer, all that glistens is not gold, and that which we call a sardine would be a her-ring, had he been allowed to swim a year or two longer.

A Massachusetts man very considerately staked out a burial lot on his farm and dug his own grave before he went to the house and committed suicide by eating a little strichnine. While he was trying to be obliging, however, we can't see why he didn't walk out to the grave and climb in before he took the poison. Still, the man deserves credit for doing as well as he did. It was much better than going off into some lonely place and being taken to the morgue and costing the estate no end of trouble and expense in advertising, searching and identifying.

A Frightened Witness.

On one occasion, says Oakey Hall in his reminiscences, a witness to all moral conclusions perjured himself, and yet he seemed cool and natural. Presently the Recorder of the Court turned in his peculiar, affable way, and said:

"My friend the room is not hot, the day is cold, and yet you are in a perspiration—are you not?"

There were no signs of this, but the witness instantly caught out his handkerchief, and began to mechanically wipe his forehead.

"Are you ill; you look so pale?"

He responded by turning pale and gulping down some water.

Here the counsel for the defense showed signs of wishing to interfere, as being afraid of his witness breaking down, but the Recorder interposed with:

"Sorry to have agitated you; but my duty is like yours" (the Recorder had an impressive voice) "to ascertain nothing but the truth and the whole truth."

Then the witness turned and said: "Please let me go; I am indeed ill."

His testimony was withdrawn by consent.

At the conclusion of the case the Recorder said to me:

"I knew he was committing perjury, for he had a peculiar tremor of the eyelids which, from my nearness to a witness, I can always see. And this tremor may generally be noticed in men and women who are lying."

Asleep on a Telegraph Wire.

People have been known to sleep on house-tops, in the branches of trees, and on rare occasions in a sleeping car, but probably the first case of any one selecting the top of a telegraph pole as a lodging place occurred the other night. Shortly after midnight Jack Donegan, one of the linemen employed by the telephone company, appeared, fully equipped in his working uniform, including climbers, at Wood Brothers' ice house, at the foot of Holmes street, and asked the men in charge for the loan of a short piece of plank. Supposing that he wanted to use it in making some repairs of the telephone lines, a large number of which pass directly in front of the ice house, they gave him the plank, but were unprepared for the surprise which awaited them, for Donegan, taking the board under his arm, climbed to the top of a high pole near by, and laying the plank across the wires, coolly rolled up his coat for a pillow, and, stretching himself on the plank, composed himself for a snooze and was soon snoring as peacefully as a babe in its mother's arms. The employees of the ice house expected to see him fall every moment, but were afraid to make any attempt to wake him lest it should frighten him and precipitate his tumble. About four o'clock in the morning an officer came along and, being made acquainted with the situation, yelled at the high-minded individual roosting at the top of the pole, and endeavored to persuade him to come down from his lofty perch. Donegan woke up in good order, but failed to recognize the officer's authority to order him down. Finding persuasion of no avail, the officer, not to be outdone, and being something of a climber himself, "shinned" up the pole, and by the application of a little force brought his man safely down to terra firma, and Donegan was taken to the station. A few hours afterward he was arraigned in the police court and fined $5 for drunkenness. He said that sleeping on the top of telegraph poles is one of his favorite pastimes, and he is unable to see any reason why he should be disturbed in his repose.—Kansas City Journal.

A Cat Story.

A Mr. Hawley, of Cincinnati, has a large tomcat that usually graces his news stand. He is strictly carnivorous, and has a cat's appetite for birds. He is old, and not sweet tempered. On Saturday Mr. Hawley missed him, and on going to the basement found the old mouser tenderly taking care of a half-fledged sparrow that had fallen from its nest under the eaves. The little bird was cosily nestling in the long fur of old Tom's back, and there it stays except at brief intervals. At night it nestles under the fur of the old cat, which moves as carefully as an experienced nurse; and when the cat rises to his feet and walks about, he does it with the stately bearing of a home guard officer. So much engrossed is he with his pet that he stays in the basement all the time.

A FASHION exchange says that the jersey is the most serviceable garment of female wear that has been produced of late years. Yes, that's so. When a girl is done wearing her jersey, she can use it up in making ear muffs and smoking caps for her fellow, or else cut it down and make an undershirt for the baby.

Advance Step in Dentistry.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The most popular dentist of this city, Dr. D. Francisco Garcia, member of the Royal University, states that in all cases of troublesome neuralgia, arising from the teeth, his patrons are recommended to use St. Jacobs Oil, and the most satisfactory cures have followed. It is a specific for toothache, earache, bodily pains, and proof against household accidents.

Hard Lumps in Breast.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—I wrote you some time ago that I thought I had a cancer. There was a large lump in my breast as large as a walnut, and had been there four months. I commenced taking your "Golden Medical Discovery," "Favorite Prescription" and "Pellets" in June, and the lump is gone. Yours gratefully,

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and as its name indicates is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SATIR, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, Pa., and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

Sewing-Machine Industry.

These remarkable items pour into our office daily. Mr. H. S. FULLER, with the New Home Machine Company, of Orange, Mass., writes, May 23, 1883: "I have used Hunt's Remedy in my family for over ten years. My wife was troubled with catarrh of the bladder, suffered intense pain in the kidneys and loins, and urination was accomplished with the greatest of agony. My friends thought that she could not recover. We tried doctors and medicines, and although better at times she would grow worse again. She was obliged to use the urinal as many as fifteen times in a night, and was growing worse daily. At this time my attention was called to Hunt's Remedy, and I concluded to try it; and after using one bottle she was a good deal better, the inflammation was reduced, and the water more natural. She began to gain in appetite and felt no pain in the back and kidneys. She could attend to her household work without pain, and this had been a great burden to do, even the lightest kind of work. After using six bottles she was completely cured. Since then I have had occasion to use Hunt's Remedy for kidney and liver complaints, and found it to be just as represented, and I consider it a most wonderful medicine. I would not be without Hunt's Remedy in my family; and I have recommended it to my friends here in Orange with equally good results."

Gastrine.

The increasing demand for this preparation as a household remedy for indigestion and dyspepsia is sufficient proof of its efficacy.

THE button-holes of Chrolithion collars and cuffs are made so they will not tear out like other kinds.

IN DYSPEPSIA

There is a sensation of faintness, with distress in the stomach, and soreness across the pit of that organ, originating in the pressure of the half-digested food. Recovery is slow, but is much forwarded by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which invigorates the appetite.

Invigoration

My wife became so debilitated that she weighed but 110 pounds. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, her health is better. She now weighs 130 pounds.—S. WOODBERRY, 105 Summer Street, Boston.

Malaria

I have been suffering most of the winter with malaria and blood poison; my physician helped me in a measure, but nothing permanent. I was urged to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it has wholly eradicated the disease.—MRS. F. A. LINCOLN, Chicago, Ill.

Constipation

Mr. GEORGE K. RUSSELL, proprietor of an extensive paper mill at Bellows Falls, Vt., says he has found Hood's Sarsaparilla the best remedy he ever used for constipation—the business man's most serious affliction—and he would on no account be without it.

How to Shorten Life.

The receipt is simple. You have only to take a violent cold, and neglect it. Abernethy, the great English surgeon, asked a lady who told him she only had a cough: "What would you have? The plague?" Beware of "only coughs." The worst cases can, however, be cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. In Whooping Cough and Croup it immediately allays irritation, and is sure to prevent a fatal termination of the disease. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

Dr. Roger's Vegetable Worm Syrup

Is one of the most pleasant, or palatable preparations for worms we have ever known. It is thoroughly efficacious, and never requires any other medicine to carry it off after using it.
